Events [5] / Leah Abir [6] April 23, 2017

In August of 2016 Tohu Magazine published Lama Suleiman's article Afrofuturism and Arabfuturism: Reflections of a Present-day Diasporic Reader [7].
The article received wide local and international distribution, as well as many responses. The upcoming conference continues the pioneering discourse opened in the article and expands it further. The speakers will present Afro- and Arabfuturistic arguments and will explore the relevance of ethno-futuristic thinking to art and culture in the Middle East.

Among the various talks in the conference, Reynaldo Anderson will speak about how Afrofuturistic thought has become, in an era of rising nationalism, a bed of critical thinking regarding racism, Eurocentrism, and exploitation. Yael Messer will present local art works that imagine the day after the completion of the Zionist project. Arrate Hidalgo will talk about "Speculative Queerness," or "How Science Fiction Ruined my Relationship with the Gender Binary."
